

Tax Credit For Window Film

New! - Tax Credit For Window Film

The Energy Policy Act of 2005 provides federal tax credits for homeowners who make certain energy-efficient improvements. Window film has been added to the list of improvements for 2007. Anyone who has purchased qualifying 3M Window Film products between Jan. 1 and Dec. 31, 2007 can receive a 2007 tax credit. For a list of qualifying 3M Window Film products, please click here. A tax credit directly reduces your overall income tax, which is much better than a deduction, which reduces the amount of income subject to tax. Homeowners can receive a 10 percent credit on the costs of qualified window film products, up to a maximum of $500.

Complete IRS form 5695 and file your 2007 Income Tax Return by April 15, 2008. Forms can be downloaded on the IRS website or by clicking here, along with a list of other available energy efficiency tax credits. You will need a copy of the dealer invoice for the window film product, separated by cost for film and installation. Installation costs are not eligible for the tax credit. You will also need a copy of the manufacturer's certification statement, which determines which products qualify based upon where you reside. Make sure to keep a copy of both of these documents for your records.

More Than One Way to Save Money...

Energy efficiency can lower your federal tax bill and your monthly energy bill. Heat gained through windows makes up a significant portion of your summer utility bill. 3M Window Films reduces heat gain by up to 79 percent, which helps lower energy consumption.

Other Advantages of 3M Window Film

In addition to energy and dollar savings, window film offers numerous other advantages. As a homeowner, you can improve indoor comfort by reducing or eliminating hot spots. Another benefit is reduced fading of your home furnishings, helping to keep your home looking beautiful. By blocking up to 99% of the sun's UV rays, our films help protect your family. Selecting 3M Window Films give you peace of mind. That's because we have one of the most comprehensive warranties you can get; backed by a company you know and trust.
